"United Kingdom," he said, "I would be glad to assist us, and would be a source of great strength to the empire. The burden is very heavy for the little island of the United Kingdom to bear, but we are willing to go bearing it alone as long as you desire us. To any assistance Canada would be glad to contribute, and we are fully received; as it would greatly enhance the forces now working to preserve peace. The more Canadians there are, the more the peace of the empire, the more we shall be pleased. This holds true with other dominions, such as Australia, South Africa, and so on."

Coming to judicial questions, Lord Haldane again remarked that although he had never set foot on Canada, he had formed the impression that more familiar with the constitution and many of our problems than any other living Englishman.

"I have been a student of your affairs, and I should be glad to have my long practice as a barrister I held."

Toronto, Sept. 1.—After a brief but generous distribution of his returned address by Sir William Mackenzie to those who had been convinced that he knew as much as all the experts who said that no one could hope to finance on favorable terms in London this summer, he borrowed millions he did not stay away long when he had provided for the general necessities of his several Canadian projects, chief of which was the Canadian Pacific Railway. The two public lotteries made—an issue of $2,000,000 of 4-2 per cent. terminal bonds, and an issue of $1,000,000 of 5-2 per cent. first year notes—were over-subscribed and it was understood that some private financing of considerable proportions were already in the hands of the banks. The proceeds will be used for western construction. The best opinion of the London financiers, now inclined to the belief that the Canadian crisis had been averted, was that the sale of the bonds and notes would be a success, and that the sale of the bonds and notes would be a success, and that the sale of the bonds and notes would be a success.

Will Be Granted

The agreement between the street railway employees union and the city, which has been in force for two years, expired last night and as yet no new agreement has been made yet. The men are asking for a decided raise in salary, being an increase of 3 1/2 cents an hour for all classes of workmen.

Heads of the street railway department state that men on the Edmonton system are receiving as high pay as the men in any other city in the province. They say that the railway is not paying yet the increase will not likely be granted.

THRESHING IS DELAYED.

SUIT OVER GIRL BROUGHT UP BY NEGROES BEGUN

Her People Try to Get Oklahoma White Back from Black Family.

BEAUTIFUL YOUNG WOMAN
ADOPTED WHILE A BABY

Guardians Are Reported to be Wealthy—Legal Battle Will Decide the Fate of Viola
Brown.

Muskogee, Okla., Sept. 1.—Adoption by a negro woman when she was a tiny baby, Viola Brown, a beautiful white girl, with one-eighth Cherokee blood, has grown to womanhood in the family of her foster parents, and they have now taken her to her home in Oklahoma, where her mother and father, and her two brothers, are beginning a legal battle for her possession, and a suit was filed in the juvenile court in Muskogee this week alleging that the girl is not under proper parental control, and asking that the court place her in either in a white institution or with reputable white people.

The girl's white relatives are in comparatively poor circumstances. Her negro foster parents, Wiley Jones and his wife, are among the wealthiest negroes in Oklahoma, and they have engaged the best legal talent to defend the suit.

The action of the girl's relatives was hastened by a report circulated among the negroes that Mrs. Jones has boasted that she is "raising a white wife" for her son. The Jones woman indignantly denies this statement, and says that she has brought up her boy and the girl as brother and sister, and does not want them to marry. "There are plenty of girls with blue eyes, pretty hair and fair skin," the negro woman says, "unhappily."

Viola Brown, or Beatrice Jones, as she is generally known, has a strange life story. Though the negro family with whom she lives have gratified her every whim and lavished a fortune upon the child. The girl is said to be 17 years of age. She is cultured on the rolls of the Cherokee Indian nation in the United States Indian affairs here as Viola Brown, and the date of her birth is given there would make her 17. White people who are familiar with her story and her foster mother say that she is not so old by several years.

Deceased by Father

She is the daughter of "Cookie" Brown, who was a descendant of a prominent Cherokee family, and a quarter blood Cherokee. Her mother was a white woman, considered by her father's Cherokee relatives as much beneath him, and whom they refused to recognize. The mother died when Viola was three days old, and she had a baby the same age, which died 24 that time. Jones was in poor circumstances, and Mrs. Jones mother, "Aunt Patsy" Mackintosh, a Creek freed-woman, assisted in caring for "Cookie" Brown's baby girl.

The relatives refused to recognize the baby, and the father did not know what to do with the infant that the death of his wife had left on his hands. "Aunt Patsy" took the baby to her daughter's home and Martha

Jones gave the child the place that her own baby would have had, "Cookie" Brown entered into an agreement by which he was to pay Martha Jones for the care of the child and clothe it, but he soon married again, and Jones and his wife claim that he never paid them a cent. Brown's second wife died, and he married a third time. He visited the baby in the negro home occasionally, and admonished the little girl not to forget the debt of gratitude she owed Mrs. Jones.

Attends Negro School.

When Viola, or Beatrice, as Martha Jones first named her, was a few years old "Cookie" Brown went to Pennsylvania on a business trip and died there, without making any permanent disposal of the child. So Beatrice remained with the Jones family. Her white relatives knew where she was, knew that as she grew older she was sent to the negro schools with Amos Jones, the negro son of the family. White people in town saw the pretty little girl with her blue eyes, her fair skin, and her long brown hair, and from the negro school house, but no attention was paid to her.

Finally, in 1910, the Browns began an attempt to gain the custody of the girl. They brought the matter into the courts, and an agreement was reached by which Jim Brown, a white man, was named her guardian, and Wiley Jones and his wife agreed to place her in a white school in another state. This agreement was tentatively carried out in a desultory fashion. The Browns allege that the girl was placed in a white school in Kansas, to which negroes are also admitted and where the girl was also sent to school, and that in time matters slipped back to their former state.

Oil Enriches Family.

In the meantime "Aunt Patsy" and her daughters had been given allotments as Creek freedmen. The development of oil in Oklahoma had begun, and almost the first oil struck in Indian Territory was in the vicinity of the land belonging to the Mackintosh negroes. They leased their land, and wells were drilled. Soon they were wealthy. They have invested in other property, and have kept and increased the fortune that came to them.

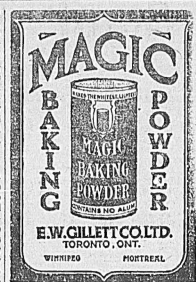

The white girl has shared their prosperity. She has traveled extensively. She is beautifully dressed. It may be said to the credit of the negro woman who has brought her up that she has been allowed very few negro associates as she has grown into girlhood. Mrs. Jones does not allow her to associate with negro boys and girls, but she has been the playmate, the schoolmate, and the constant companion of the negro son.

When the papers in the suit were served on Jones and his wife the woman said: "I love her as well as if she were my own daughter." "I have always loved her everything she wanted, and I'll keep on doing it. I've brought her up and educated her so that she can associate with white folks if she wants to."

Property Not Issue.

But will she want to associate with white people? Will she turn now to her father's family, or will gratitude toward the negro woman who nursed and clothed and educated her, prove stronger than the call of the white blood in her veins? The suit is entangled in a tangle of moderate value, but it is not for possession of her property that her white kin and the negro family are doing battle.

"We do not seek the custody either of the girl or of her property," said her aunt, Mrs. N. J. Thompson, the white woman who filed the suit. "We only ask that she be removed from the custody of the Jones family and saved from the possibility of a negro marriage, and that she be placed either in an institution or with some reputable white family, as the court judges best.

As the negro woman who has mothered the girl retorts: "We do not want her little property. As compared to our wealth it amounts to nothing. But I love her. I have always provided for her and guarded her, and I will continue to do so."

The girl herself says nothing. Her foster mother refuses to allow her to be interviewed. When the newspapers tried to get a picture of the girl the negro woman refused to give them one.

"I don't want her picture in the papers. I've brought her up carefully. She's as good and pure and sweet a girl as there is in any home in the world, and I don't want any more publicity given her than is absolutely necessary."

SOUTH AFRICA
WILL HAVE A COLOR PROBLEM

Negro Question in African States as Acute as It Ever Was in America.

ROYAL COMMISSION HAS SUBMITTED A REPORT

Negroes Are Continually Assaulting White Women Until Now Life is Scarcely Safe in Some Parts.

Cape Town, South Africa, Sept. 1.—That the problems incident to residence in the same land of whites and blacks are becoming as acute in South Africa as in America, is indicated by a late report from the commission under the chairmanship of Sir Nellius de Vries, appointed to investigate assaults on women.

The commission did its work with great thoroughness, visiting every portion of the Union except the purely native territories where the holding of a formal inquiry would have been a judicious and unnecessary. It received statements from 300 persons able to give reliable information, and the subject under investigation. The statistics and other information gathered by the commission shows that a serious evil in respect to assaults on white women by natives does exist, and that on the whole it is increasing.

In 1901 the total number of convictions of negroes for this crime throughout the Union was 11; in 1912 it had grown to 70. In the year preceding it was 80.

Whites Blamed.

The commission declares there would be little reason to fear this peril if all of the white settlers could be depended upon to behave in a manner befitting members of a stranger race and heirs of a superior civilization. The report indicates that the illicit liquor trade on the Rand is creating a class of whites who are bringing the name of white womanhood into disrepute. The commission also declares that there are white women and girls so criminally careless in their treatment of black house-boys that they give the latter "opportunities of seeing them in a state of undress in which they would not dream of showing themselves to a white man." The report also asserts that there are instances where white women, mistresses or servants, are seduced with a much greater and more shameful complicity.

Supplies Information.

The practical recommendations of the commission promise to raise a storm when they are presented to parliament. The commission recommends that the name of the victim of an assault, or by any detail by which she could be recognized, be not published, in the interests both of justice and humanity. Another suggestion, that the name of the accused be suppressed, probably will meet with considerable opposition. Legal prohibition of inter-communication is one of the strongest recommendations of the report, which proposes also the raising of the age of

The Durban system of Kaffir beer-drinking and eating shops, under municipal control, is recommended for the whole Union. As the adoption of the Kimberley system of closed compounds, this latter proposal will be stoutly opposed by the trading community of Johannesburg, for it would involve many stockholders in ruin.

Another recommendation to which two of the most experienced commission members, Sir Medus de Villiers and Sir John Graham, dissent is for the abolition of jury in mixed cases of assault.

Missouri's coal supply will hit 9,000 years, it is estimated, at the present rate of 4,000,000 tons yearly.

EVELYN'S CHILD LIKE HARRY THAW.

According to a friend who has studied Russell Nesbit, the three year old son of Evelyn Nesbit, whose father she alleges is Harry Thaw, the resemblance between the youngster and the escaped slayer of Stanford White is remarkable. "Thaw has denied that he is the father of this child," the boy is said to resemble his father in facial appearance to a marked degree. "He has the same starting eyes, set wide apart, and the face oval," said the friend. "And another thing, Russell is subject to fits of unusual violence about the face, even tearing his hair when things do not quite please him."

ORCHESTRA STOPS SALE OF BANANAS

Sons of Italy Abandon Business and Stand Entranced When Orchestral Selections Are Played.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 1.—"A dozen bananas, please."

"Say, don't you hear? I want a dozen bananas!"

The grand swell of the "Lucca" sextette was closed by the new orchestra in the renovated restaurant in the west wing of the city market. The fruit seller came back to earth and his bananas with apologies.

"I couldn't hear you. You no hear it—the music!"

That explains the unusual spectacle of the city market, standing the fruit stands without being impeded at every stop to buy something.

These periods of inactivity on the part of the stalloppers were coincident with the rendition of classic selections from the grand operas by the orchestra, an innovation in the life of the market place.

Ah, there's "Cavalleria Rusticana." A group of stallkeepers desert their stands and enter in the west wing of the city market.

Others have their eyes fixed on the steel beams in the roof. For variety the musicians break out with "Squaky Oskama." The Italians rush back to their stalls in a panic. Then it is your American butchers, fish sellers and produce dealers join the orchestra as a special whistling section. But the Italians try to drown it with their

He refused to make any statements regarding the matter to the doctor, who called up the police. The man had an ugly slash across his cheek, which had just missed his jugular vein. Upon being questioned he said he had been at the colored club on Queen's avenue, interfering between two men who were quarrelling and that they had struck him with a razor. He was very reticent about the matter, stating that it served him right. He wished to go home, but on the order of Dr. Cook was taken to the Royal Alexandra hospital.

Intense excitement prevailed at the corner of Jasper and First street Saturday night when auto bearing about number 2555, driven by J. W. The little building was crowded with Indians, who were told by the archbishop and Mr. Laperriere that the service was being held in the church, and that they were to be married.

Mr. Laperriere had been warned that the consequences might follow the flashlight, and he "beat it" without waiting to remove his camera from the tripod. It being 4th of July, one of the Indian baby boys was christened—Woodrow Wilson. Woodrow looked hungrily at the baptismal font and when the archbishop produced nothing more nourishing than water, he set up a worse howl than a disappointed office seeker.

Messrs. Cornwall, Miller, Hough and Laperriere of the Cornwall firm, the surplus baggage. With a long and hard portage ahead, the members of the party informed their packs to be absolute essentials. They will be accompanied across the portage by Mr. and Mrs. Cornwall and Mr. Norbury, who have made the trip before. Mr. T. P. O'Kelly, who was to have been one of the party, was five days late in reaching McPherson, and may not be able to catch up with his companions.
